HALE BYRNES HOUSE TO UNVEIL PAINTING OF WITNESS TREE

BY BETSY PRICE

The Hale Brynes House this weekend will unveil a painting featuring an American sycamore tree under which George Washington once held a council of war with the Marquis de Lafayette. The Newark nonprofit commissioned the painting because the 300-plus-year-old witness tree—called that because it was alive during a historical moment—may soon die or be removed.

Leaning precipitously toward the 270-year-old house, the sycamore is battling multiple tree diseases and has a hollow in its trunk large enough for adults to stand in.

“It was full grown when Washington was here on Sept. 6, 1777,” said Kim Burdick, a historian and resident manager of the house. Since then, the once-flat lot has eroded and tree branches have been lopped off by the state and utility companies because they’ve stretched over the road.

Burdick said she’s not sure how tall the tree is, but it is taller than power lines, she said. More than two men would be needed to reach around the trunk, she said, and several board members are worried the tree might fall on the house.

As the group considers what to do—and for the moment, the state arborist’s advice is to not worry as long as the witness tree fully leafs out in the spring—one volunteer has grown seedlings from the tree. Only a handful of Josh Loper’s nearly three dozen attempts survived.

One already is in ground in Pittsgrove, NJ, where it has grown taller than five feet. That site was chosen because its soil is similar to the soil at the Hale Brynes house, where the tree flourished for centuries. Both the town of Dover and Historic New Castle are considering a place to plant one of the seedlings, Loper said.

HALE BYRNES HISTORY

A few days before the Sept. 11, 1777, Battle of the Brandywine, Washington met beneath the tree’s limbs with Lafayette, “Mad” Anthony Wayne, “Fighting Quaker” Nathanael Greene and Henry Knox, a bookseller turned artillery whiz. He and the generals were laying plans to stop the British from taking Philadelphia.

The painting, “Prelude to Brandywine” by Virginia artist Bryant White, was commissioned by the American Revolution Round Table of Delaware. The round table is sponsored by the Hale Byrnes organization.

The unveiling will be at 3 p.m. on Dec. 3, at the house at 606 Stanton-Christiana Road, Newark, just past the intersections of Route 7 North and Route 4.

White, who specializes in Revolutionary War-era art, will talk about his painting at 7:30 p.m. at the house. The round table found White through Lynn King, a member of the historical re-enactment group First Delaware Regiment. King had met White and his wife, Pamela, at various re-enactments and worked through the Hale Byrnes board to hire him.

Burdick particularly likes the folk art feeling that comes through in the painting.

King points out that White researched what Washington would have been wearing and included a blue sash the Founding Father would have worn then, but later stopped wearing because he felt it was a British sign of aristocracy he didn’t think was appropriate for the colonies.

ODESSA HOUSES' CHRISTMAS DESIGNER TAKES ON THE WHITE HOUSE

BY BETSY PRICE

The designer responsible for the literature-themed holiday decor at the Historic Houses of Odessa got a bigger canvas to work with last week: The White House.

Bryan Miller of Dover was one of 175 volunteers chosen from applicants around the country to help create the 2022 edition of holiday cheer at the president's home. For 17 years, he's interpreted children's literature to decorate one of the Odessa houses for the holidays.

This year's White House decor had a "We The People" theme. Miller, who was an art teacher at Middletown High School for years, was assigned to the Blue Room, the site of the official White House tree. The 18 1/2-foot concolor fir tree from Pennsylvania was tall enough to be wired into the space that usually holds the room's chandelier, Miller said. All the decor was designed before volunteers arrived. He worked with a team that ranged from eight to 20 people to execute the bird-themed design for the tree.

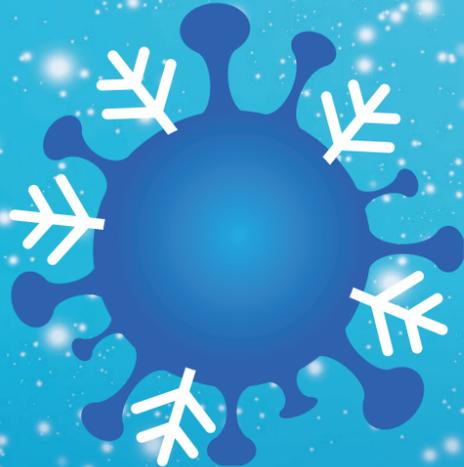

"Some volunteers came just the first three days, some volunteers came only the last three days and some volunteers stayed the whole six days," Miller said.

The tree included bird nests, bird houses and models of every state bird, including—naturally for the room—a blue hen from Delaware, as well as birds from six territories and D.C. itself. "They were all handmade and beautifully done," Miller said.

The volunteers never saw the designs on paper, but the designer was there at all times working with them.

"Some people were, say, painting things to go on the tree or assembling things to go on the tree and then others were putting them on the tree," Miller said, "so it was a big team effort."

'SISTER ACT' OFFERS DEL. ACTOR CHANCE TO REPEAT FUN ROLE

sisterhood. The musical comedy was adapted from the 1992 film that starred Whoopi Goldberg.

O'Hara is in a half-dozen scenes and is part of the ensemble in three songs. He serves as one of the heads of the convent. Constantly concerned with financial matters, soul music surprisingly puts him in a different mood. Emmi said he's the only performer who will be in both productions.

For about two weeks, the rehearsals overlapped. Luckily, both directors want to emphasize the comic elements of the part, and the Candlelight production won't get to assigning movement until after the Milburn Stone production closes, so Emmi is facing less confusion.

"I like the part, and I'm having fun with it," he said of why he decided to audition for it again. And he also likes the people he's creating with. "Most of my friends—probably all of my friends—are from the theater," he said.

Alliyah Thorpe, the director in the Milburn Stone production, had already seen Emmi perform, so his audition there was only singing, no acting. Ditto for his audition at Candlelight with director Lauren Vitalo and music director Anthony Vitalo. And he's created theater with both of them before.

He's playing Monsignor O'Hara in "Sister Act" in a production at the Milburn Stone Theatre in North East, MD, running Dec. 2-11. Tickets are on sale now.

And he will play the same character in the Candlelight Theater production in Ardentown, running Jan. 21-Feb. 26, with online ticket sales for both Wednesday matinees already sold out.

"Sister Act" is about a murder witness put into protective custody at a convent and disguised as a nun. She invigorates the church and community but in doing so blows her cover. When the nogoodniks find her, they find themselves up against the power of her newly found

SNEAK PEEK: CHANCERY MARKET FOOD HALL AND BAR

BY PAM GEORGE

In downtown Wilmington, dining options are abundant, from Le Cavalier to La Fia and The Quoin. But if residents and workers near the Brandywine River crave a variety of culinary choices, they have to schlep for their meals. No longer.

On Thursday, The Chancery Market Food Hall & Bar will open at 1313 N. Market Street, which longtime Delawareans still call the Hercules building. The new food hall features eight food-and-beverage vendors in a distinct indoor/outdoor setting.

A behind-the-scenes look at the new venue proved that the public is in for a treat. When it comes to bringing together multiple food vendors, the 12,000-square-foot hall is breaking the old rules—and that’s a good thing.

CHANCERY MARKET FOUNDERS

The 12-story trophy building has been a conversation starter since it opened in 1983. The $80 million project quickly received press for its 12-story atrium with potted trees and plantings.

Hercules, however, is long gone, and now many tenants in the renovated building are law firms, including Potter Anderson & Corroon, Saul Ewing Arnstein & Lehr and Morris, Nichols, Arsht & Tunnell. The occupants led to The Chancery Market’s name. After all, the Court of Chancery is Delaware’s business claim to fame.

But the market is no corporate café. The culinary collective is the brainchild of Scott Johnson and TSG Hospitality, which has been redeveloping 1313 N. Market St. and 1201 N. Market St. in the central business district.

DEL. MAN VIES FOR $10,000 ON FOOD NETWORK GINGERBREAD SHOW

BY KEN MAMMARELLA

Joe Daigle is a definite newcomer to gingerbread displays, but somehow—maybe those posts on Facebook or Instagram?—he got an invitation from the Food Network to appear on a bakeoff show.

His “Nutcracker on Stage” episode of “Holiday Baking Championship: Gingerbread Showdown” debuts at 10 p.m. Monday and is scheduled to air five more times in December. The winning team gets a $10,000 prize.

Daigle, a Brandywine Hundred resident, chose to pair with friend Sean McGovern, pastry chef at the Urban Outfitters headquarters in Philadelphia, and a man with his own mouth-watering Instagram.

“When it debuts, Sean and I are going to a bar in Philly that agreed to put it on TV,” Daigle said. “So I’m going to be watching it live like everybody else.”

Of course, he knows what happened (but isn’t allowed to talk about it) but said he will be interested in how that September day will be presented.

“It was a huge challenge,” he said. “There are two other teams, and they’re extraordinarily talented and experienced bakers. After meeting the competitors, I felt pretty far out of my depth since I’ve only done this a few years and only made four gingerbread displays before that. It was exhilarating, insane trying to make something from cookies being chased by the clock.”

They had 10 hours from unpacking their gingerbread in the Food Network’s Tennessee studios to completing their creation.

LAWMAKERS TAKE OATHS JAN. 10 BUT ALREADY WORKING

BY CHARLIE MEGGINSON

Even though Delaware’s state senators and representatives won’t be formally sworn in until Jan. 10, their work begins the day after Election Day—and so do their paychecks.

Delaware is one of four states where lawmakers assume office the day after an election. Three other states’ lawmakers assume office on Election Day, while eight others assume office sometime before the end of the year.

In the remaining 34 states, there’s a “lame-duck” period during which outgoing legislators remain in office until new members are sworn in sometime in January.

Until Delaware lawmakers take the oath of office, they are known as representatives-elect or senators-elect.

“Between now and Jan. 10, they’re answering constituent calls, going to meetings and that type of stuff, but they haven’t formally taken their oath of office,” said

Rich Puffer, chief clerk of the Delaware House of Representatives.

Some of the meetings they’ve attended have been with their caucuses—the House and Senate Republicans and Democrats. Each of the four caucuses met to select its leaders for the next General Assembly.

During the pandemic, members were sworn in virtually. Not since the 2018 election have members experienced the full, in-person ceremony. On Jan. 10, members will cram into the House and Senate chambers along with their families, but they still won’t take the oath right away.

LONGTIME DELAWARE SUPREME COURT JUSTICE TO RETIRE

“Like his father, Justice Vaughn has served our state and its citizens with great distinction,” said Delaware Supreme Court Chief Justice Collins J. Seitz Jr. “As former Chief Justice Veasey has remarked, Justice Vaughn has a straight-forward/no-nonsense approach to the Rule of Law. The court will miss his hard work, steady hand and unflappable nature.”

BY CHARLIE MEGGINSON

Delaware’s second longest-serving Supreme Court justice will retire in May 2023. Justice James T. Vaughn, Jr., 73, announced his decision Tuesday.

“It has been an honor and a privilege to serve since 1998 as a Superior Court judge and Supreme Court Justice,” Vaughn said in a letter to Gov. John Carney. “I will always appreciate the memories of working with my colleagues on the bench and with court staff in our efforts to maintain the rule of law in this state.”

Vaughn was just a couple of months shy of being the longest-serving member of the Supreme Court. Justice Karen Valihura was appointed in July 2014, a few months before Vaughn.

Vaughn first joined the bench in 1998 as the resident judge for Kent County Superior Court. In 2004 he was elevated to the position of Superior Court president judge. Ten years later, he was appointed to the Delaware Supreme Court by Gov. Jack Markell.

Prior to joining the bench, Justice Vaughn spent 22 years as an attorney in private practice in civil and criminal law, first at Vaughn & Vaughn in 1976, then at Vaughn and Nicholas, before joining the firm of Schmittinger and Rodriguez in 1988.

Vaughn also served as a member of the Clayton Town Council from 1979 through 1989, including three years as president. He was elected to the Smyrna School Board and served there between 1989 and 1994, including three years as the board’s president.

Vaughn, a U.S. Army veteran and Delaware native, graduated from J.B. Moore High School in Smyrna in 1967. He received his B.A. from Duke University, graduating magna cum laude in 1971. He later earned his J.D. from Georgetown University Law Center in 1976.

DELAWARE GOP LEADERS: PARTY NEEDS CHANGE TO WIN

BY CHARLIE MEGGINSON

Republicans did not fare well in Delaware’s Nov. 8 election. Democrats widened their majority in the state Senate, maintained the balance of power in the House, and won every election for statewide elected offices.

In the wake of the Republican wallop, some party leaders are hoping the party will begin to move in a more productive direction—one that appeals to the center, defined by a clearly communicated, positive vision for the First State. Without change, some insiders fear Republicans will lose influence with each passing election.

“I believe we are not good at messaging and making sure people know what we do on a daily basis to serve our constituencies,” said Rep. Mike Ramone, R-Pike Creek South. He was elected House minority leader after a two-hour caucus meeting Nov. 22.

“We enable ourselves to be branded by whatever polarizing national topic exists at any given moment,” he said.

Ramone’s ascension to leadership marks a departure from the Delaware Republican Party’s strategy up to this point. Rep. Danny Short, R-Seaford, served as minority leader for nearly 10 years before caucus members decided the time was right for a change.

“If there’s a message that I hope resonates within our party, it’s that we don’t all need to think exactly alike on every single item, but at this point, our state needs help economically, we need help in the education environment, and the people in our state are getting taxed to death,” Ramone said. “We need to change that.”

DSU'S LARGEST GRANT EVER WILL FOCUS ON HEALTH DISPARITIES

BY JAREK RUTZ

It was a historic day for the Hornets of Delaware State University Nov. 23, as the school announced it has received the largest research grant in DSU history. The 5-year, $18.36 million research grant from the National Institutes of Health will help establish an Interdisciplinary Health Equity Research Center on campus.

The center will investigate how certain populations, typically underserved communities, are disproportionately affected by negative social and health outcomes.

The $18.36 million grant nearly doubles the next largest grant in school history, which was $10.9 million neurosciences grant, also from the National Institutes of Health.

Sen. Trey Paradee, D-Dover, said during a ceremony celebrating the grant that research on underserved populations is desperately needed.

The mortality rate for Black children is 12 deaths for every 1,000 births, while it's just 3.1 white children die for every thousand born, he said.

"It's over four times the rate," he said. "That's the sad reality and it's something that the state has been working on addressing. We have not made the kind of progress that we need to make and that is affecting children of color up and down the state."

Dr. Melissa Harrington, DSU's vice president of research and one of the principal investigators of the grant, said Delaware ranks No. 40 in the nation for the high incidence of cancer, high cholesterol and high blood pressure. She also noted it ranks 43 in obesity, 45 for high-risk HIV behaviors and 49 for drug-related deaths per capita.

DSU has applied for this grant five times. Having finally earned it, Harrington joked that she could actually enjoy her Thanksgiving and not spend all of it typing grant proposals.

Dr. Sangeeta Gupta, the other principal investigator of the grant, noted that there will be no physical building. Instead, the money will support researchers and their work. If the grant gets renewed in five years, the university could build a physical center, she said.

"It's an award that holds you accountable, and if we deliver, NIH will renew," Gupta said. "Right now our focus would be more on the personnel and getting quality research done, especially addressing health disparities since Minority Health and Health Disparities is the branch of NIH that gave us the award."

TEACHERS UNION CALLS FOR PAY COMMITTEE TO #MOVETHEMEETING

BY JAREK RUTZ

Delaware's teachers union is circulating a petition that demands a state compensation committee move its monthly meeting time an hour later so teachers can attend. Right now, the Public Education Compensation Committee, which is considering raises for teachers and other school workers, meets at 3:30 p.m.

LACK OF TEACHER VOICE

"If you want to hear from educators, hold meetings when they can attend," the petition from the Delaware State Education Association reads.

The DSEA move follows a call two weeks ago from the union for teachers to attend the Dec. 12 meeting to protest last month's committee vote that put off any action on pay until late in 2023.

The compensation committee is evaluating and making recommendations to salary scales for teachers and other school workers to help attract more teachers to Delaware, forge a larger pipeline of employees and combat recruitment efforts from New Jersey and Maryland. Those states already have announced coming pay hikes.

The Delaware State Education Association's #MoveTheMeeting petition is calling for the compensation committee to push its start time back to 4:30 p.m. and stop meeting at the end of teacher work days. The union says more teachers would be done with their day at 4:30 p.m. and available to give public comment during the meetings. Out of the 15 people on the committee, Christina School District's David Kohan is the only current teacher.

MANY DE DISTRICTS DON'T EVALUATE SUPERINTENDENTS ANNUALLY

BY JAREK RUTZ

Even though the job of superintendent of education is one of the most powerful in a school district, many Delaware districts don't perform annual reviews of theirs.

"Some boards have a formal review, and some don't," said Donald Patton, board member of Christina School District. He was a teacher and principal for decades before being elected in May. "How do you hire someone in your top position, the only person that you hire as a board member, and there's no evaluation being done until the contract is up?" he asks.

Advocacy group First State Educate is learning that annual performance evaluations for school districts are not common.

"Hundreds of millions of dollars, learning outcomes where they are, and incredibly challenging teaching conditions means the stakes are very high for quality and sustainability," says Laurisa Schutt, executive director. "Evaluations can be collaborative learning tools that focus us on our top strategic priorities. Without feedback, it's hard to know where we are and how we are progressing."

Two of the primary duties of school boards is selecting and supervising the district superintendent.

"School board members do not have to be experts in any one area, but they need to be able to ask the right questions and acquire information essential to making good choices," says the National School Board Association website. "Finances, curriculum and testing, strategic planning, state and federal legal requirements, and evaluating the superintendent's performance are some of the demands on modern school boards."

WHY EVALUATE THE SUPERINTENDENT?

The average salary for superintendents in America is well into the six figures, with some making more than $200,000, according to a study from the School Superintendents Association.

RED CLAY BOARD MEMBER QUESTIONS LEARNING COLLAB'S TRANSPARENCY

BY JAREK RUTZ

A Red Clay Consolidated School District board member is pressing the new Wilmington Learning Collaborative to advertise meetings.

Cathy Thompson, the former head of the board, asked Superintendent Dorrell Green to ensure that the newly-created board is as transparent as possible during their Nov. 16 meeting.

The Learning Collaborative's memorandum of understanding was signed Nov. 1 by members of the boards of Red Clay, Brandywine and Christina school districts.

On Nov. 16, Thompson pointed out, the new public group indicated it will comply with the Freedom of Information Act, which requires posted meeting notices and for citizens to be able to access unreleased or uncirculated documents upon request.

"I'd like to know when their meetings are and where they're going to advertise the meetings, because that's going to be very important for community engagement and for everybody's engagement," Thompson said,

"because right now...it's hard to know how they're operating." Green said that concern should be on hold until the collaborative's governing council is formed, which the existing members of it are in the process of doing.

Efforts were unsuccessful to reach Thompson or Green for comment.

The 20-page agreement says each district superintendent and city school board member to be on the council. That means that six of the governing council's members are already set: superintendents Green, Lincoln Hohler of Brandywine and Dan Shelton of Christina and board members Shanika Perry of Brandywine, Alethea Smith-Tucker of Christina and Adriana Bohm of Red Clay.

VIKINGS ADVANCE TO SECOND STRAIGHT STATE CHAMPIONSHIP

BY JASON WINCHELL

St. Elizabeth got nearly 500 yards and five touchdowns from its dynamic running back duo of Quasim Benson and Chris Character, as the Vikings outlasted Seaford, 46-35, in a DIAA Class 1A semifinal Saturday night at Abessinio Stadium.

The second-seeded Vikings will meet the top seed, Laurel, on Dec. 10 at Delaware Stadium. It is a rematch of last year's 1A title game, won by the Bulldogs, 28-14.

Benson did not play a whole lot last week against Indian River, but he and Character looked just fine against the Blue Jays. Character scored first, going 59 yards up the middle early in the first. After a Seaford field goal, Benson streaked 69 yards for the first of his four scores.

The defenses stepped up after that, with both teams forcing turnovers on downs or punts into the second quarter. But Character could not be stopped with about nine minutes remaining in the half. He carried the ball 47 yards to the end zone to make it 20-3, but in what would become a theme for the night, Seaford answered quickly. Three plays into their next drive, the Blue Jays watched quarterback Careen Bolden hit a wide-open Tre'von-Keith Paulson for a 58-yard TD.

Each team would score once more in the first half. Benson covered 88 yards in two plays for the Vikings, only to see Bolden return the ensuing kickoff 70 yards for the score.

Seaford got as close as four points in the third when Jazonte Levan—who carried 24 times for 217 yards—ran 35 yards on the Blue Jays' first possession of the second half. But that was the beginning of the crazy-ness. Benson scored to restore the double-digit lead, but Levan got that back.

The game's most fortuitous play came a bit later. Benson took a handoff and gave it to reversing Character. He ran the ball 59 yards to the Seaford 20, only to have it knocked loose by a defender. The Vikings' Gavin Andrews picked up the loose ball at the 14 and ran the rest of the way for a touchdown. It was 46-29 St. E's.

The Blue Jays got one more long touchdown pass, but they were unable to get the ball back from the Vikings. The Vikings improved to 11-1, while the Blue Jays finished 8-4.

21 YEARS LATER, DOVER RETURNS TO FOOTBALL TITLE GAME

BY BENNY MITCHELL

The players on the Dover Senators football team were not even born the last time the Senators played in the state championship game in 2001. Most of their parents are too young to remember the last time Dover won a state title in 1988, but they are all aware now that the Senators are headed to Delaware Stadium in two weeks to play for a Class AAA state championship versus the Smyrna Eagles.

“We are real excited and real proud of what our guys have done and where they have come from. They have put a lot of hard work in and it’s a great story of their hard work paying off,” Dover head coach Chip Knapp said.

John Parker and Tyron Abrams each scored three touchdowns for Dover as the Senators pulled away from St. Georges in the third quarter for a 48-14 win at home.

Dover scored on its first possession when Parker took a Nahseem Cosme pass 30 yards for touchdown. Brandon Yoder added the point after kick as the Senators jumped out to a 7-0 lead. Yoder was perfect on point after tries converting all seven kicks.

St. Georges answered in the second quarter when Donovan Brooks hooked up with Jayson Askins-Brooks on a fourth and 12. Brooks caught the ball in the middle of the field and then made a move on the Dover defenders reaching the end zone for a 24-yard touchdown pass play. Joshua Freeman converted the first of his two point after kicks as the Hawks tied the game 7-7 with 8:45 to play in the first half.

Abrams answered for the Senators just 30 seconds later on a 32-yard touchdown run followed by Parker’s second touchdown of the game, a two-yard run with 2:57 to play in the first half giving Dover a 21-7 lead at halftime.
